THE LAND OF DREAMS.

The land of dreams is brighter Than this dark land of ours, Its cloudless skies are lighter, And fairer are its flowers, And hearts that earth would sever. In union close and sweet, More fond and true than ever, May there together meet.

The forms we most have cherished, That in the cold grave sleep, The beings that have perished Rise from their slumber deep, And joyfully they meet us,

With a pleasure beaming eye, And the voice with which they greet us, Is the voice of days gone by. The beggar with his wallet, Has a mine at his command, And the slave upon his pallet, Holds a sceptre in his hand. In sleep the old man loves to dwell,

He seems a boy to be; The prisoner laugheth in his cell, For he dreams that he is free. From realms of cold reality, How starts the unfettered mind, Banging as lawless through the sky As blows the mountain wind; Its home of clay forsaking, It journeys wide and far,

Carr's Poetry. THERE is no evil in this world Which men cannot relieve: And every horest mind and heart Will surely this believe: God hath ordained a perfect cure For every ill on earth,-But leaves it unto men to find. The secret and its worth. Thus H. G. Carr's discovered one And cure dyspessis and indignation, Almost beyond belief. The virtues of his Bitters are Now known unto all; And they who wish to be relieved Give H. G. Carr a call. And even if Consumption has Laid hand upon thy frame, The Syrup he has in his store Will quench the rising flame-And burses bealth to come sgain Unto the pallid cheek, And bringeth joy unto the sick, Which words can never speak. It is a sovereign, speedy cure For Quinsy—want of breath— For Asthma and throat dispases,

Which often end in death.
When others fall this will affect.
A permanent religio.
Will bring the suffering back to health,
And cheek old Death—the thief.

THE LAND OF DREAMS.

The land of dreams is brighter Than this dark land of ours,

Its cloudless skies are lighter, And fairer are its flowers, And hearts that earth would sever, In union close and sweet, More fond and true than ever,

May there together meet. The forms we most have cherished, That in the cold grave sleep, The beings that have perished Rise from their slumber deep,

And joyfully they meet us, With a pleasure beaming eye. And the voice with which they greet us,

Is the voice of days gone by. The beggar with his wallet, Has a mine at his command, And the slave upon his pallet,

Holds a sceptre in his hand. In sleep the old man loves to dwell, He seems a boy to be; The prisoner laugheth in his cell, For he dreams that he is free

From realms of cold reality. How starts the unfettered mind, Ranging as lawless through the sky As blows the mountain wind; Its home of clay forsaking,

It journeys wide and far,

From distant star to star.

Its boundless voyage taking
